Special Guest Speaker Supriya Singh

Supriya Singh is Honorary Professor at the Graduate School of Business and Law, RMIT University in Melbourne, Australia. She is a writer and sociologist. Supriya was born in India and moved to Malaysia at 23 when she got married. In 1986 she migrated to Australia. She has since worked on several academic works as well as publications such as The House over Diamond Creek and surrounding the sociological imagination which links personal troubles with public issues around money, gender, family, marriage, migration and family violence. She featured on the Saari (South Asian Australians Representing Ideas) International Women's Day 2021 profiles. She now lives in her homes in Melbourne and Dharamshala, working on her upcoming book releases.

The Girls Ate Last tells the story of Inder Kaur, an Indian woman growing up in the early 20th century. Girls were expected to eat last after the men and boys, and were often given only a few years of schooling. It is a story of women that is still repeated. With a Year 8 education, Inder Kaur, the author's mother, turned the Partition of India into a personal victory. Having to seek employment in Delhi, she educated herself one step at a time, as her marriage disintegrated, to become the founding principal of three women's colleges. This is a lucid, compelling story of womanhood and what it takes to be resilient in the face of adversity.
